Welcome

It's always been true – you don't mess with momma bear. Apparently you don't mess with momma walrus either. A walrus attacked and sunk a Russian Navy landing boat in the Arctic Ocean last week while protecting her young calves. All on board survived but the battle was declared a victory for the momma walrus. While not all have experienced it in its beauty, parental love has long been celebrated in poem and verse. Of interest it is then that one of the ten covenant words in the Decalogue points to the relationship from the children to their parents. This is our study this week in our continuing series on the Giver and His covenant law. Welcome to Campion.
